In an electronic age when images and information can magically appear at our fingertips—and disappear just as quickly—historical artifacts are, indeed, things of the past. For historians, archivists, and adventure-seekers in general, little is more enticing than the opportunity to handle the actual, physical records of the past. Books, periodicals, personal letters—not only are these vital to human history itself, these are all made possible by the people of the postal service.

The History Teacher appreciates the incredible dedication of postal service workers around the world, and acknowledges their extraordinary contributions to our lives and our history.

We hope you and your students enjoy the possibilities presented in this edition of The History Teacher, including a special focus on The Student and our annual celebration of the prize-winning student authors for National History Day.

The History Teacher publishes articles of three general types: (1) reports on promising new classroom techniques, educational programs, curricula, and methods of evaluating instructional effectiveness; (2) analyses of important interpretations, leading historians, historiographical problems, and recent trends in specific fields of historical research; and (3) critical review essays on audiovisual materials, textbooks, and other secondary works suitable for classroom use.

The History Teacher also publishes reviews of audiovisual materials, books, supplementary readers, and other printed classroom materials, with evaluations of their scholarly reliability, formats, and effectiveness of presentation. Reviews are commissioned in advance. Readers interested in contributing reviews should advise the Editor of their qualifications and fields of specialization.

Submission guidelines for The History Teacher are available on the final page of this issue. Additional information for contributing authors is available at <<https://www.thehistoryteacher.org/contributing>>.

Correspondence regarding contributions to The History Teacher and materials for review should be sent to the Editor, The History Teacher; California State University, Long Beach; 1250 Bellflower Boulevard; Long Beach, CA 90840-1601.

The Society for History Education affirms that it does not discriminate on the basis of race, religion, national origin, age, or sex. Inquiries concerning the application of Title IX and other federal and state statutes may be referred to the Affirmative Action Officer; California State University, Long Beach; 1250 Bellflower Boulevard; Long Beach, CA 90840.

The History Teacher disclaims responsibility for statements, either of fact or opinion, made by contributors.

The History Teacher is abstracted or indexed in Historical Abstracts, Education Abstracts, Professional Development, Academic Search, America: History and Life, and the U.S. Dept. of Education's ERIC.

CONTRIBUTORS

November 2020

Lucia Antonelli-Carter is originally from Bologna, Italy. She received an advanced degree in Modern European History from the University of Bologna in 1998. She is an Associate Professor of History at Mars Hill University, where she teaches European and world history courses. Her current research interest reflects on the ways in which historical consciousness and historical thinking prepare college graduates to face with confidence the challenges and opportunities of the current political and economic environment.

H. Robert Baker holds a Ph.D. in History from the University of California, Los Angeles. He is an Associate Professor and Director of Undergraduate Studies in the Department of History at Georgia State University, and a Chancellor's Learning Scholar.

Peter Burkholder is a Professor of History at Fairleigh Dickinson University. He is on the editorial board of The Teaching Professor, is a consulting editor for College Teaching, and serves on the advisory boards of the Society for History Education and the International Society for the Scholarship of Teaching and Learning in History. His article on content and critical thinking, published in The History Teacher in 2014, won the American Historical Association's 2015 Gilbert Award for the best article on teaching history.

Max Grinstein is a student of Belmont Home School in Houston, Texas. He won first place in the Junior Paper division at the 2020 National History Day contest for his essay, "The Fifth Circuit Four: The Unheralded Judges Who Helped to Break Legal Barriers in the Deep South."

Gregory B. Lewis holds a Ph.D. in Public Administration from Syracuse University. He is a Professor and Chair of Public Policy in the Department of Public Management and Policy in the Andrew Young School of Policy Studies at Georgia State University.

Natalie Miller is a student at East High School in Duluth, Minnesota. Her paper, "Too Strong For a Woman: How Bernice Sandler Created Title IX to Break Barriers for Female Faculty in Higher Education," won first place in the Senior Paper division at the 2020 National History Day contest.

Daniel S. Murphree received his Ph.D. from Florida State University and currently is an Associate Professor of History at the University of Central Florida. A proponent of the Scholarship of Teaching and Learning (SoTL), his research focuses on how to improve undergraduate history instruction and has been published in venues such as Perspectives on History, Teaching History, and The Journal of American History.
